FROM THE COMMITTEE

It has been a tough time for our retailers recently. There was a large exodus of locals over the summer period and our town centre has been affected by road works as well. That our town centre thrives in the most part, is a testament to Te Atatū residents who are great at shopping locally. Every little purchase helps, so if you think you might feel like an ice cream today, please think about grabbing it in our little town centre and enjoying it in Jack Pringle Park.

Following a public meeting to talk about traffic and congestion issues, held by Te Atatū Peninsula Business Association (TAPBA), a proposal to establish a planning group was put forward by Te Atatū M.P. Phil Twyford. The first meeting of that planning group was held recently and the group aims to look at issues currently affecting Te Atatū including planning, housing, pipes, traffic, roads, parking and public transport. Read more on Page 5.

One of our much loved businesses has changed hands and we will miss the friendly faces of Wine Villa's previous owners, Jason and Jane Lee who were part of our village for 12 years. The good news is, the business has been bought by another valued Te Atatū business family. Meet the new team on Page 3.

Find out what you should be doing in the garden this autumn and how to prepare for chillier months, with Marisa Vodanovich and her Views on Gardening on Page 4. And make the most of those prolific Te Atatū grapes in the garden by trying the grape jelly recipe on Page 6, Views on Food.

Rivercare's restoration project taking place in Tawa Esplanade is transforming the reserve. Read about what they have achieved and how life is returning to the little stream that flows through the reserve, on Page 11.

A young father of two from Te Atatū Peninsula is the proud author of his first book, Mystery Under Maungauika. Read about how Andrew Wassenaar ticked becoming an author off his bucket list, on Page 13.

Thank you Te Atatū for your on-going support of our hard-working retailers. Here's hoping for a long, warm autumn to enjoy and not too many traffic delays!

Welcome to Wine Villa's new owners

Wine Villa has new owners, the Gandhi family who are already long-term members of our business community.

After 12 years, previous Wine Villa owners Jason and Jane Lee decided to embark on their well-deserved retirement, and the Gandhi family decided to buy the business from them.

New Manager Nevil Gandhi says the shop has been in the village for more than 25 years. "It is quite an old business that has been continually in touch with the Te Atatū community," he says.

New Manager Nevil Gandhi with brother-in-law Sam Gandhi ▲

He relates this to his brother-in-law Sam Gandhi's store, Te Atatu Discount Superette just two doors down, saying that Sam also has a good community connection.

The Gandhis will make some fresh changes at the shop over the next six months, with a renovation planned.

This will allow more shelving for a wider selection of wines with competitive prices and regular promotions.

Nevil says security measures have also been stepped up, with bollards and CCTV installed.

"I'd like to thank Jason and Jane," he says "for introducing us to the wine business and all the customers." ●

Hello Green Thumbs!

As summer starts to wind down, it's time to roll up our sleeves and get ready for the cozy embrace of autumn in our gardens. While it's sad to say goodbye to the vibrant blooms and juicy tomatoes, there's something special about the crisp air and the earthy scents that come with autumn.

Veggie Patch Vibes

Now's the time to start thinking about transitioning your veggie garden from summer to autumn mode. As the days get shorter and temperatures start to drop, certain veggies will thrive while others might need a little TLC.

First up, let's talk about those leafy greens. Spinach, kale, and lettuce adore the cooler weather, so get those seeds in the ground or transplants in your beds now. They'll thank you with a bounty of fresh, crunchy goodness for your late season salads and soups. There's also broccoli, cauliflower, cabbage, leeks and rhubarb to get going too.

Don't forget about the root veggies!

Carrots, beetroot, parsnip and radishes love the cooler autumn weather, making it the perfect time to sow their seeds too.

For something a bit larger you can look at planting out citrus now - lemon, lime, mandarins and oranges - into well draining soil.

Flower Power

Autumn isn't just for veggies; it's also a magical time for flowers. While many of your summer blooms will have wound down, there are plenty of autumn stars ready to steal the show. Think about adding some vibrant chrysanthemums or cheerful marigolds to your garden beds or containers. Their bold colours will add a pop of excitement to your outdoor space, even as the days grow shorter.

It's also time to prepare for spring now too. There should be spring bulbs available in stores, including: tulips, daffodils, anemones, ranunculus, freesias and hyacinths. And let's not forget that March is also the time to get ahead by planting your sweet-pea seeds so they can overwinter and be ready for a prolific display come spring.

Prepping for the Chill

As we embrace the trees changing colour with the cooler weather, it's also essential to prepare for the inevitable chill that comes with it. Keep an eye on the weather forecast and be ready to protect your plants if a frost is on the horizon. And don't forget to mulch. A thick layer of mulch will help insulate your soil and keep those roots warm and happy throughout the season.

So, let's embrace the changing seasons and get ready for all the beauty that autumn has to offer.

Happy autumn gardening!

Marisa

Multi agency group tackles intensification issues

A multi-agency group is looking at ways to mitigate the effects of intensification in Te Atatū.

A proposal to establish the multi-agency group was put forward by Te Atatū MP Phil Twyford, at a public meeting late last year about traffic and congestion issues, held by Te Atatū Peninsula Business Association (TAPBA).

Phil Twyford suggested the Henderson Massey Local Board (HMLB) spearhead the project, and with agencies invited to be around the table including Kāinga Ora, Waka Kotahi and Watercare, along with TAPBA, the group aims to look at issues currently affecting Te Atatū including planning, housing, pipes, traffic, roads, parking and public transport.

At the group's first meeting in February, Phil Twyford suggested that alongside the multi-agency group there also be a working group for the community to gather, advocate and work on solutions. He says there are aspects of growth that can cause anxiety in the community.

"Increased competition for on-street parking, the lack of wastewater and stormwater infrastructure, the need for safe walking and cycling and ongoing roadworks." He says ideally a community working group would attract people who want to work on solutions.

HMLB's Ingrid Papau says communication about these issues between Council Controlled Agencies (CCOs), the Local Board and the wider community is vital.

"My hope is that a working group could be an opportunity to give our community a voice and connect better with the appropriate project information and CCOs." Details on the proposed community working group will be announced in the coming months.

Meanwhile, it is intended that the agency representatives will meet regularly to try to find solutions around anything from light phases, to how to welcome new residents. ●

Grape Jelly

You can use any grapes for this gorgeous translucent jelly. I used green grapes and sometimes add some passion fruit pulp during the cooking. If you want to use less sugar, add a jam setter available from supermarkets.

YOU WILL NEED

4-5 cups of stemmed grapes
2 cups of sugar
½ cup of lemon juice
Clean jars and lids.

METHOD

1. Place washed grapes in a pot and crush with a potato masher. Simmer crushed grapes over low to medium heat for about 15 - 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat.
  2. Seive over a large bowl, pushing as much of juice through as possible. Either leave to sit for a few hours so remaining juice can drain into the bowl, or place grapes into a clean cloth, gather and twist to extract remainder of juice.
  3. In a heavy bottomed pot, add juice, sugar and lemon juice and bring to the boil, stirring to dissolve the sugar. Cook on high for ten minutes, then test to see if it will set. Drop a few drops on a cold saucer. If a skin forms on top, it is ready. If not, cook for a few minutes more.
  4. Heat your jars and lids on low in the oven until sterilised, then using gloves, carefully pour the hot jelly into the jars and seal tightly.
- Wonderful served with cheese, or on toast. •

Vibrant EcoFest coming to Te Atatū Peninsula in March 2024

Learn to make butter like they did one hundred years ago, explore Auckland's largest wetland on a VIP kayak tour; nurture native seeds to help restore our local streams; master the art of Japanese gift wrapping! These are just a few of over 250 inspiring and sustainable activities on offer during this year's EcoFest, running from 15 March to 14 April.

There will be more than 100 events to choose from in West Auckland alone, from composting workshops to discovering our local wetlands. EcoFest's aim is to make sustainability fun and accessible; inspiring people to make simple changes to reduce their impact on the environment.

"EcoFest has always been a grassroots festival, offering local change-makers a chance to share their skills and ideas, championing our local environment, supporting collaboration and celebrating the importance of community," says Carla Gee, CEO of EcoMatters Environment Trust.

Starting on Friday 15 March, the month-long EcoFest 2024 programme will be packed with events, activities, installations and workshops for people of all ages and at any stage of their sustainability journey.

This year in Te Atatū Peninsula, give back to our beautiful moana and join the beach clean-up day at Harbourview-Orangihina Park. Organised by Sustainable Coastlines, Rivercare Group and Forest and Bird will also be on hand at the event to share valuable information about our area and its significance for bird biodiversity. Afterwards, enjoy music, games, and Phoenix Organics drinks to celebrate a day of mahi.

West Aucklanders already know and love EcoFest, which has run in their area for more than a decade now. In 2023, organisers EcoMatters Environment Trust joined forces with Kaipātiki Project, Beautification Trust and Waiheke Resources Trust to take the festival regionwide.

Life Returning to Tawa Esplanade

Thanks to a three-year restoration project by Rivercare Group Te Wai o Pareira, life is returning to the little stream running through Tawa Esplanade.

Once a tangled mess of honeysuckle, blackberry, and bindweed concealing household rubbish and broken concrete, the reserve is making its way back from the brink, with native plantings taking hold, and is now at Stage Three of the six-stage restoration.

Recent water testing has shown that dissolved oxygen in the stream has increased and Rivercare

Group's Alan Clist says this could be because there is more shade from plantings, encouraging the natural macroinvertebrates to return. There has been an eel sighting and water testing has shown the presence of shrimp, flat spiral snails and the larvae of native dragonflies. The last time the water was tested in 2021, there were no macroinvertebrates detected.

Alan says the first stage of restoration was on the Matipo Road side of the reserve where there were some native trees already.

Auckland Council helped with Stage Two of the restoration by sending in a robot to munch up the invasive weeds and taking away dumped rubbish.

There was once a concrete path through the area and topsoil had been scraped off, so the soil quality is poor and this is where Stage Three was carried out. Planting was done mainly by children from Matipo Primary and also students from Rutherford College. Because of the poor soil, some of the new trees died and are being replaced, with more in-fill planting to be done this winter in Stage Four of the project. Stage Five will see planting continued on the highest part of the reserve.

Alan says the most important part of the project is on-going maintenance because invasive weeds can overtake the young plants in one season.

"Maintenance is key to keeping it under control," he says. "For the new trees to survive you have to stop the weeds until the canopy gets established, which slows the weed growth below."

Alan says the area which stretches down to an important inter-tidal zone, used to be a bread basket for local iwi. There are two unexplained dips in the ground of the reserve, one of which has visible shells embedded, and Alan says they could be middens.

The stream flows crystal clear when there are no sewage overflows or fresh concrete run-offs. ▶

Rivercare believes it is possible that the water source of the stream is a nearby natural spring that has been concreted over to create a carpark, and they have found documentation which supports this. The stream water flows crystal clear unless it has been raining heavily, when two sewage overflows go into it - one from the reserve itself, and one from across Matipo Rd. Alan says there has also been an incident when the stream was grey from sediment after a concrete truck was hosed off.

There are still large privet and wattle trees which will have to be removed and there is clear evidence of recent garden waste dumping in the reserve. Alan says there will need to be education around the disposing of weeds with neighbouring residents, with alternatives offered. Meanwhile there have been three weeding sessions already this year, with more planned.

Mystery Under Maungauika.

A young father of two from Te Atatū Peninsula is the proud author of his first book, Mystery Under Maungauika.

Andrew Wassenaar wrote and self-published the young adult fiction story, about a group of Auckland teenagers who investigate the secret tunnels at Maungauika (North Head) and make their own shocking discovery.

Andrew who is the father of two sons, aged two years and seven weeks old, published his book under the initials AJW. He says although it is intended for young adults, the book has so far been read and enjoyed by more adults than teenagers.

The 33 year old, whose career has been in marketing and copywriting, says he was just 17 and in a sociology class at university when he had the idea for the book. The lecture covered a court case that had been held to try to establish whether the tunnels were there, and what they might hold, with eyewitnesses testifying.

"I couldn't stop thinking about that," says Andrew. "I was on my laptop and didn't listen to the rest of the lecture because I was busy researching. During that lecture I wrote the prologue to the book."

Andrew says he didn't work on the story again until ten years later, instead starting his career. He came back to the book during the covid pandemic and says it was covid lockdowns that gave him the opportunity to finish the book, and he made the most of the time.

"I ticked it off the bucket list, and it felt good to finish it".

He says it was because he worked in marketing, that he made the decision to self publish and although recently preoccupied following the arrival of his baby son, Andrew is now busy marketing the book, which is getting a lot of interest from schools. Tēnā Koutou, I hope you are all enjoying the great weather, not like last year.

 With the increasing number of fires with e-bikes and battery powered devices, our safety message today is on "Lithium-ion battery safety."

- Always charge e-scooters and e-bikes away from exits to ensure you can safely escape in the event of a fire. Where possible these should be stored and charged outside or in a garage, shed or carport, away from living spaces.
  - For smaller devices, such as vapes, phones, and laptops, do not charge these under a pillow, on the bed or on a couch – they can overheat and cause a fire. Do not overcharge your batteries. When your item is fully charged, disconnect it from the charger.
    - Never store or leave batteries or devices in areas where they can be exposed to heat or moisture. Do not leave devices in direct sunlight or in parked vehicles where they can quickly heat up.
- Only get device repairs and battery replacements done by a qualified professional.
- If a device or battery starts to smoke or emit flames. Evacuate immediately and close doors (if safe) to slow the spread of fire.

- Once in a safe location, call 111 and wait for firefighters to arrive.
- Ensure no one goes back inside the building for any reason. Battery gases, vapour and smoke are highly toxic and flammable and must not be inhaled.
- If anyone has been exposed to battery fluids, debris, smoke, vapours, or flames, seek urgent medical assistance.
- If a small battery or device such as a vape or phone starts overheating. Unplug it from the power outlet if it is charging.
- If possible, move it outside, away from any flammable material and windows or doorways.
- Small devices can be dropped into a bucket of water if this can be done safely. If your device starts to smoke or release fumes, evacuate immediately to a safe location and call 111.

Battery disposal

- Do not put lithium-ion batteries in the rubbish.
- Recycling is always the best option – contact your local council for a recycling location.
- Do not leave discarded batteries in piles.

Welcome everybody to another safety message.

With Autumn approaching daylight saving ends on Sunday 7th April 2024. Clocks fall back an hour at 2am. It means longer nights meaning you may be away during the hours of darkness. It is time to focus on keeping your home secure by putting on your lights and maybe

- Call 105 if it's happened already and to report non-emergencies to Police.
- Go online to 105.police.govt.nz to report and get updates on certain types of non-emergency situations (currently lost property, intentional property damage, shoplifting, general theft and theft from a car)
- If a crime is taking place or there's a threat to life or property, it's an emergency so call 111 drawing the curtains to keep opportunist thieves away.

Without these simple tasks it may indicate to opportunists that there is no one home. It may be worth getting an automatic time switch for indoor lights that can be seen from outside. Another quick tip also, put a time switch on a radio that has been tuned to a talkback station, this will give the impression that the house is occupied.

It's also a good reminder for people to lock vehicles on driveways and not to leave valuables in vehicles as the trend of thefts in vehicles continues to be a problem. A good deterrent is to park in a garage if you have one or in a well lit area near your home. Tamper proof screws will also slow down the increasing number of number plates being stolen.

Inside your homes, be sure to keep valuables out of sight and locked away when you're not home. Use locks and dead bolts and keep all your keys, including car keys, out of sight and out of reach.

Keep your plants and hedges trimmed as visibility plays a big role with unwanted strangers entering your property. We do not want to give them any hiding places.

Ensure that gates or access to the rear of the house are locked and secured. Don't forget to lock your garage and shed, your tools could be used by thieves to break in to your own home.

A list of your valuables with the serial numbers is a great way to help identify misplaced or stolen property Police often locate during search warrants.

These are just a few simple measures to keep you and your whanau safe.
